William L Gevedon

Dr. William L. Gevedon was born on the waters of Grassy Creek in Morgan county on March 6, 1883, and died near Grassy Creek, on Oct. 22, 1934, aged 51 years, seven months and 16 days.

His early life was spent on the Carter Fork of Grassy Creek, then a wilderness with but few inhabitants; and then removed from the centers of civilization; cut off from the advantages of religious or educational institutions, he managed by careful, diligent research, to store his mind with that useful knowledge which made the foundation for the success of his professions in after years.

What a history he could have written of the changes thru which he passed in his thirty-five years of life! Here he saw old Morgan county carved into seven places, six of which were formed into other counties. He was four years old when Johnson county was formed; seventeen when Rowan was formed; twenty-one when Magoffin and Wolfe were formed; and thirty years old when Elliott and Menifee counties were formed. He witnessed the great evolution of wilderness to civilization: woodland to meadows; hovels to mansions; schools and churches; fields to highways, and literacy to education, and lived thru four of the destructive wars in which our country has been involved. At the beginning of the Civil War he enlisted in the confederate service, was a member of the 6th Kentucky Regiment, under Gen. John S. Williams, and was in the battles of Ivy Mountain, Middle Creek, and Saltville, Va.

He was progressive, instructive and constructive. He believed in the upbuilding of every thing physical, moral or religious. He taught, urged and exhorted for the betterment of his neighborhood and country and was always ready with a liberal donation to carry out his convictions.

In the year 1895, he began the study and practice of medicine with Dr. Murlin Carter, then of Grassy Creek, and for sixty-five years he remained continuously in this profession. In his day, he was considered one of the best physicians in east Kentucky, and had, no doubt, the most extensive practice known at that time. From Jackson to Mt. Sterling; from Uniontown to Paducah, no point was too far, no day was too hot, no night too cold or dark, he always heard the call and obeyed the summons to the relief of the suffering and the comfort of the dying. Thru rain, mud, snow and sleet, he pushed his noble horse to the rescue, and it differed not if he knew there would be no remuneration. His faithful horse was his companion, and no man ever lived who loved a fine horse more than he.

In the year 1875 he united with the Baptist church at Grassy Creek and soon after entered into the ministry. He accumulated one of the largest and best religious libraries in the country and made a close study of this profession, and for nearly sixty years held steadfastly in this work, and no doubt has preached more sermons and baptized more people than any country minister of his time. From Virginia to Kansas; from Tennessee to Ohio; in city and country his eloquent appeals made converts and friends and aroused the Christian spirit where ever he went, with no salary, no remuneration, but ever at his own expense, and thousands of people can testify to his being the means of turning them from Satan to Salvation. He was always liberal with his means and has spent fortunes in the help of Sunday schools, churches and church missions, and was always ready to contribute to the needy poor. He was pastor of two or three churches as long as he was able to get into a car for the trip and worried about them as long as he lived, and would insist on being taken to his regular appointments, long after he was too feeble to be taken there.

In 1893, he married Abigail, eldest daughter of the Rev. M. B. McClure, a true woman of sterling Christian character, who was a real helpmeet and who always aided and encouraged him in his dual professions. To this union was born four sons and three daughters all of whom have journeyed to the great beyond except the two eldest, J. F. Gevedon and Dr. E. C. Gevedon who reside at Grassy Creek. The body was prepared for burial by Patrick and Prater, undertakers of Saltersville. The funeral was conducted at Grassy Creek church in the presence of a thousand people who came to view the last remains of a man they loved and honored, and to place upon

LOCAL BANK ROBBER

A flutter of excitement spread thru the town and surrounding country on Thursday morning of last week when Goebel Ratliff found, when he came to open up the Commercial Bank for regular business, that the place had been burglarized some time between closing hours the night before and opening hour on November 8.

Mr. Ratliff consulted other bank officials and a cursory examination showing that the time safe had not been entered, it was thought best to close the bank for the day and notify officials of the insurance company and take steps to find the criminals.

Entrance to the banking room was made thru a rear window with the use of a wrecking bar or similar tool. Once in the building, the rear door was unlocked from the inside and used in carrying water from a faucet in the back yard. Evidence indicates that at least three or four persons were in the gang.

The bank's time-lock safe is built into and contained in a steel vault. Entrance to the vault is thru a heavy steel door and then two lighter barred steel doors. An acetylene torch was used to burn locks and hinges off all these doors.

The time-lock safe is constructed in layers. Some of these layers can be turned with acetylene, but other parts cannot. A hole about five inches in diameter was burned part way into the safe, and drilling operations were started on the next layer, but the job of entrance was too rough and was abandoned.

Two expert mechanics, one from Louisville and one from Ashland, acquainted with the safe's mechanism and equipped with suitable tools, worked for sixteen hours to open the safe's door for the bank. The clock mechanism of the safe had been ruined and the safe would not open of itself as it had been in the habit of doing these many years.

A close inventory found no damage to books, notes, or records. The bank's small change of silver, nickel, and copper, to the amount of $1284.45, kept in the vault outside the safe, was carried away by the robbers.

The bank carried burglary insurance, and the bonding companies have adjusted all loss, both of money and of damage to vault and safe.

The Kentucky Bankers' association has a standing reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of any one implicated in a bank robbery. Several reports of clues have been investigated, but no arrests have been made.

SCHOOL HOUSE STARTED

West Liberty has long talked about a modern and much needed school building. But up to a few weeks ago there was nothing definite done about the matter.

Thru the efforts of the county superintendent the hopes and dreams of our people are now to come true. A blue print has been made and the project tentatively approved both by the Morgan County Board of Education and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Building is to be constructed of native stone with two main floors, occupying a site on the present school property immediately east of the present building.

A force of about thirty men are now engaged on the project, some in preparing the site and others in quarrying and hewing stone.

The whole undertaking is a tremendous one and calls for the full sympathy, help and co-operation of the entire community. We have gone into a job that needs doing and we are going to see it thru. We will be proud of it when it is done.

His Mer their many floral offerings. The obituary was read and discussed by S. Monroe Nicksell of Lexington, and the funeral services were delivered by Elders VanHoose of Paducah, and Testerman of Mt. Sterling. The six pall bearers, Rollie, Victor and Edward Gevedon, Hattie Nicksell, Dr. Ward Amey and Joe Hlevius were the grandsons of the deceased.

His favorite text in life was, "Whatsoever thing ye desire when you pray, believe ye receive it and ye shall have it." His favorite song was, "I hear Thy welcome voice, that calls me, Lord to Thee."

There is no gallant warrior in all his place,

And we mourn as we end our sad story;

But he lies there at rest at the end of his race,

While his spirit has gone on to glory.

Unprecedented Approval

The astonishing vote of approval given governmental policies of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the recent election is the most impressive endorsement ever given a president of these United States.

Although a sweeping Democratic triumph was forecast by James A. Farley, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, not even the most sanguine dared hope that the citizenship would so emphatically place its stamp of commendation upon the new deal program as proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

The most sanguine Democratic prognosticators hoped for a gain of six seats in the senate, but their hopes were exceeded as the swelling tide of Roosevelt endorsement resulted in a certain gain of nine senatorial positions.

In every previous off-year election the party in power in the national capital has lost seats in the house of representatives. Such has come to be the natural trend of political events. Relatively small losses have come to be expected. Large losses have without exception, presaged a change in the national government.

Six months ago Democratic leaders conceded the probability of losing as many as 70 seats in the lower house of congress. Republicans predicted greater losses than that. Yet the election which has astonished the nation in the scope of its sweep, resulted in an actual gain in the Democratic majority in the house of representatives.

So eager were the voters to lend encouragement to the President, who has labored so effectively in behalf of all the people, that had President Roosevelt himself been a candidate for the presidency it is quite probable he would have carried every state in the union.

Outcome of the balloting refutes the limitation from Literary Digest straw votes which pretended to reveal a decided waning of popularity of the New Deal and its superb leader.

With amazing unanimity Republican candidates who denounce the recovery program of the President, sought to discredit constructive efforts that have brought gratifying improvement in general conditions, were rebuked for their partisan attacks, and their services discredited.

Extent of the debacle which has befallen the Republican party is revealed in the decisive defeat of Senator Reed in the rockribbed Republican state of Pennsylvania and ensuing from seats in the United States senate of his reactionary associates, such as Robinson of Indiana, Fess of Ohio, and Walcott of Connecticut.

In Kentucky eight of the nine seats in the house of representatives were captured by Democrats who are in accord with the program of President Roosevelt and will support his leadership. Only in the overwhelmingly Republican Ninth district was a Republican successful in capturing a congressional seat.

There have been those who predicted that there was a diminution in volume of the vote cast in the recent election as compared with the election of 1932 which gave the Democrats their unprecedented majority. It would be erroneous to draw from that fact the conclusion that there is a waning of enthusiasm in Kentucky for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

True it is that the total vote in the congressional election fell far below the vote in 1932 in total ballots cast. But the explanation is clear and unmistakable. In two of the nine congressional districts was there a contest sufficiently close to warrant a spirited campaign.

In the second district Congressman Cary did not even have a Republican opponent. In the other districts the Republican opposition was so feeble that little interest was aroused in the outcome of an election the results of which were a foregone conclusion. As a consequence of that situation little more than half the voters went to the polls, not because they have grown lukewarm in the president's policies, but because Democratic candidates for congress were in no danger of defeat.

Some there are who profess to see danger in the decisive denunciation of the opposition party, in the tremendous endorsement given the national administration, but President Roosevelt has demonstrated that he is a man of such superb judgment that we predict the effect of the election will be to impress him with the responsibility and duty of so cautiously steering the ship of state into the harbor of safety that he will strive with renewed effort to justify the extraordinary faith his countrymen have expressed in his leadership and wisdom.

THEY DON'T MIX

Whether you are a "wet" or a "dry", this fact will interest you: Repetition of prohibition has resulted in a tremendous increase in drunken driving, according to reports of police bureaus, safety departments and similar organizations. No one knows whether this is due to people drinking more now than during prohibition era—but it is a fact that more people are taking drinks and then getting behind the wheels of their cars.

A driver does not even have to be noticeably drunk to be dangerous. Investigations show that very moderate doses of alcohol produce the following effects on the average driver: Slower reactions, less uniformity in response, a narrowing of the field of attention, a rise in self-assurance which breeds recklessness, and a general decline in mechanical efficiency. The change occurring may be relatively slight for when the driver is in sole charge of a hurtling mass of metal, it becomes important indeed. A man who shows few signs of his drinking, and is a pleasant and rational companion, may become a menace to the public in his car.

The worst of the country should take the lead in discouraging the drunken driver. He is one of the worst dangers to the cause of safety on the highway. It is certain to be used as a potent argument for prohibition. Today, with liquor legally on sale in the bulk of states, legislation to curb drunken driving should be made even stiffer than in the past—and should be enforced to the letter. Alcohol and gasoline don't mix.

ONE-HOUSE ASSEMBLY

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 9.—George W. Norris, revamp of constitutions, is confident that the one-house legislature which he won for Nebraska is his greatest achievement.

This radical change in Nebraska's lawmaking machinery, wrought in less than a year, the senator places above the amendment to the federal constitution which, after more than 10 years of work, abolished "lame duck" congresses.

Nebraska voters Tuesday stamped an 55,000-vote majority on the amendment to the state constitution to substitute a one-house legislature of 30 to 50 members, elected by districts on a non-partisan ballot, for the present chambers. These include 35 senators and 100 representatives elected on party tickets. The 1935 legislature will determine the number of members in the new body. The aggregate salary to be divided among the members was fixed in the amendment.

When the one-house legislature assembles in 1937, it will be the first time in more than a century such a body has existed in the union. Vermont abolished its one-house legislature in 1835.

Parents-Teachers

In the absence of the president, the vice president, Mrs. D. R. Keeton, called the house to order. The meeting opened by singing American, Rev. Harlan Murphy conducted the devotional, reading the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians.

There was a large attendance and an interesting meeting. The treasurer reported a balance in the bank of $32.81. The committee on entertainment read a list of the committees for each month's entertainment. The publicity committee is keeping the public informed of the proceedings of the P. T. A. thru the paper and by announcements in the school rooms. The finance committee reported $10.42 proceeds from the Halloween Party. The teachers had the morning beautifully decorated for the occasion and there was a great deal of wholesome fun in spite of the inclement weather.

The program committee responded with a well gotten up program for the members of third and fourth grades, Mrs. Edna Burton and Mrs. Lorraine Lewis. The following pupils had part: Charles, Frank, Laver, Brong, Ralph, Bill, Ed, Ed Williams, Stanley, Paskey, Charles Davis, Gertrude Paskey, Marlin, Camille, Herbert, Lawrence, Roy, Helen Davis, Hendrix, Vincy, Dorothy, E. McGuffee, Chesley, Patrick, Junior, Lykins, Anna, Gross, Frances, Elam, Wanda, Carroll. The little folks got a good deal of joy out of putting on this program and the parents really felt entertained.

The men's group committee reported captain Mrs. D. R. Keeton 22 members and captain Mrs. A. P. Gillett 38 members. The house decided to give the winning class a party in the auditorium next Monday evening, Nov. 19.

Superintendent Ova Haney gave a very enthusiastic talk about the new school building, the modern P. T. A. voted unanimously to stand back of our Superintendent for this project to its completion. Their attitude, gossip and finance are to be used to support and promote all our Superintendent's efforts until accomplished—a fine, well-equipped edifice standing on a beautiful, well-kept campus and with one of the best school facilities in the state.

The vote was taken as to who won the prizes for the coming months, which resulted as follows: B. E. Whit, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Burton.

During recent military operations in the Far East, one side captured the other's general. An envoy was sent to negotiate his exchange.

"We will give you four colonels for him," said the officer.

The offer was declined.

"Eight majors?"

"No."

"What then?"

"We have given the matter most careful consideration, and the least we can accept are two dozen tins of condensed milk."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Looking Ahead

"How's that patient of yours who's always worrying about his food?" asked the doctor's wife.

"I've ordered him to eat only the plainest of foods and very little of it," replied the medical man.

"Do you think that will help him to get well again?" she asked.

The doctor smiled artfully.

"Probably," he replied; "but it will also help him to save money so that he can pay my bill."—Stray Stories Magazine.

Ethics

"What are ethics, pop?" asked the eager young offspring of the naval tailor.

"Well, Benny, I'll tell you. Suppose a sailor comes into my shop and buys a necktie that costs a dollar. He gives me a $2 bill, and walks out without the change."

"Now, here is where the ethics come in. Should I keep the extra dollar myself, or tell my partner about it?"

Safe Enough

The schoolmistress was giving her class of young pupils a test on a recent natural history lesson.

"Now, Sandy McDoor," she said, "you're a banker's son, tell me where the elephant is found."

The boy hesitated for a moment, then his face lighted up. "The elephant," he said, "is such a large animal it is scarcely ever lost."

"What is the most useful creature to mankind," asked the teacher.

"A hen, sir," replied Freddie Wilson.

DANIEL BOONE and KENTUCKY

Dr. Charles M. Knapp

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

During this year and this month of November we here in Kentucky, particularly, are celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Daniel Boone. To do so adequately the State of Kentucky through her legislature last winter created the Daniel Boone Bicentennial Commission. On Labor Day, September third, nineteen thirty-four, at Boonesborough on the Kentucky River, the Commission held its principal celebration of the year. But other celebrations have been held during the year, notably at Frankfort on June seventh by the State Historical Society, and others have been held at various places in Kentucky and other states as well. November second will be the occasion of many another tribute to the man whose name has been linked so indelibly with Kentucky and the Trans-Appalachian frontier.

A great deal of information about Daniel Boone has been broadcast this year, of some of it the writer has been guilty. Many have made addresses up on the subject of Daniel Boone and his accomplishments. Numerous articles have been published here and there in journals more or less accessible to the general public. Numerous biographies, more or less accurate and valuable, have been written and published since his death over a hundred years ago. One of the first to write of Boone was John Filson. But in spite of all that has been written and said about Daniel Boone we are going to try to narrate once more the life of Daniel Boone. But in so doing we are going to try and recount principally those incidents in his life that contributed vitally to the founding of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and that have therefore enriched his memory in the hearts of Kentuckians of all ages and endeared him to the youth of the whole land.

Daniel Boone, like many another good Kentuckian, was not born in Kentucky. In fact, he did not first enter Kentucky until he was a mature man, not until the year 1769 when he was thirty-five years of age. Further, he did not die in Kentucky but far to the west in the valley of the Missouri River, where he had taken up residence in 1799. Prior to doing so he had removed from Kentucky in 1778 to West Virginia. Whence he removed to Missouri. Thus only about twenty years of his life were directly connected with Kentucky of these twenty years it is our purpose as stated above to write here. But we can not appreciate Daniel Boone properly and estimate his services to the people who came westward to Kentucky, some in direct company with him and others who came soon after he had marked the way, without a glance at least at the training and experience of the man who was in so many ways their inspiration and protector.

Telling Fortunes in China

In China fortunes are usually told by reading the lines on the soles of the feet as well as those on the palms of the hands.

IMPROVE DAIRY HERD

The Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington recently purchased from Forward Farm in Fayette county the Jersey bull Noli. Plymouth Gauntlet. Formerly owned by G. S. Welner in Hancock county, he was bred at Wauham Farm in Massachusetts and is out of an imported cow with a record of 65 pounds of butterfat as a junior four-year-old. His two-year-old daughters are producing well in the Forward Farm herd.

The experiment station herd has completed its first year on herd test with an average production of 376 pounds of butterfat per cow. The Jersey herd made up largely of two-year-old and three-year-old daughters of remarkable fatness, averaged 266 pounds; and the ten two-year-old and three-year-old Holsteins, all bred by Amos Luka Lad Zeta, averaged 416 pounds.

CHILL THE HOG CARCASS

Chilling is an important part of home hog butchering, points out Grady Schardt of the college of agriculture, university of Kentucky. Killing should be done when the temperature is near or below freezing, proper curing and preservation of pork cannot be had unless the carcass is completely freed of animal heat. Well finished hogs weighing around 200 pounds are most satisfactory for home butchering. They have consumed less feed per pound of pork produced and are easier to handle than heavier hogs.

INDUSTRY NEEDED

Farming in Knott county and the large territory of which it is typical, cannot be depended upon as an exclusive means of livelihood, even under favorable conditions of prices and markets, declare Dr. W. H. Nicholls and W. I. Rouse, in a new bulletin of the agricultural experiment station, university of Kentucky, entitled "Farm Organization and Family Income in Knott County, Kentucky."

The publication is a report and analysis of the incomes and farm businesses of representative farm families in Knott county. The study was a part of an economic and social survey made by the Kentucky college of agriculture, the federal bureau of agricultural economics and home economics and the forest service of the U. S. department of agriculture.

"Without supplementary industrial or other non-farming occupation, it appears that the present population in this territory can be adequately supported only by contributions from other sources," the bulletin concludes.

Only 15 percent of the families studied made their living mainly from farming. The others obtained money from working in mines, with teams, stockkeeping, or in the oil, gas or timber business. Hence, the discontinuance of any of these industries tends to put families on charity, even tho they may be living on farms.

Announce Plans for Agricultural Census

Plans are announced for a census of agriculture, to be taken by the Bureau of Census, U. S. Department of Commerce, next year in accordance with the law which provides for a farm census every five years.

The census will be one of the most important and complete ever taken, according to the announcement. It will include information on farm tenure, farm acreage, crop land, pasture land, woodland, value of farms, acreage and yield of field crops, vegetables and fruits; number and value of all animals, poultry and eggs; farm population, etc.

RED CROSS AGENCIES SAFEGUARD HEALTH

First Aid, Life Saving, Nursing Care, Promote Health and Safety

Five outstanding services make up the health-conservation program of the American Red Cross, according to the annual report just issued in Washington. These services are first aid and life saving, which together have trained more than a million persons; nursing, with an active enrollment of 2,133 registered nurses; Public Health Nursing, conducted by 750 nurses in 43 chapters last year; and Home Visitation, which has taught more than 700,000 men and women simple ways of caring for the sick at home.

"The achievements of the Red Cross in public health nursing place it among the leaders in this field," said James L. Fieser, vice chairman. "This service was organized in 1919 to meet needs developed by the World War and the ravages of the flu epidemic which in 1918-1919 took so great a toll of life."

"Since that time Red Cross nursing services have been pioneers in more than one half of the counties in the United States. Many services were established were taken over later by civic, state and federal agencies, and the Red Cross continues to establish services in other new fields. Red Cross nurses made more than a million visits to patients last year, and 629,025 children in schools were inspected."

"Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick are especially important in times of depression, because they teach families to maintain hygienic conditions in their own homes and to recognize symptoms of illness early enough to prevent serious complications."

"Our courses in first aid have been instrumental in saving lives of the injured, in safeguarding the accident victim until the physician arrives, and in reducing the time lost by workers in factories, mines and other industries. We are also giving the course extensively to police and fire departments throughout the country, and to state highway patrols."

Everyone is invited to join the Red Cross during the annual membership drive which continues from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, to have a part in the health program and the other humanitarian services of the Red Cross.

An Army of Goodwill

When members of the Junior Red Cross learned that schoolbooks had been destroyed in the Kentucky floods last August they gave $100 from the National Children's Fund to buy new textbooks for use in the schools. The maximum membership for the Junior Red Cross last year was 7,350,280, an increase over the previous year of over 250,000. They carry on civic and service programs in their own communities which each year bring comfort and pleasure to thousands of needy and unfortunate people. An international friendship is built up through correspondence with Junior Red Cross members in foreign countries.
